

Questions to Ask your Doctor – End Treatment and Recovery

The treatment journey for throat cancers is difficult and there can be long term side effects which can continue to affect people long after treatment has finished. There is help available to lessen the impact of these side effects. Here are some questions which can help people understand their options.

What happens after I complete my treatment?

What can I do to aid my recovery?

What services are available to help me recover? For example, a speech and language therapist or nutritionist can be very important to speed up recovery.

How often will I need to come in for check-ups?

When will you know if I am cured?

What happens if the cancer comes back?
